COURSE LENGTH: 0.5 DAYS

What is constructive feedback? You've more than likely been on the receiving end of receiving feedback. If you're employed in a management position, you may have been responsible for providing it. Generally, constructive feedback is designed to redirect unwanted behaviour into more acceptable behavior for the company. It may also relate to meeting production or customer acquisition goals, addressing workplace behaviour and performance, or addressing employee dress or attitude.

There's no limitation to applying constructive feedback in the workplace. However, to be effective and problem-solving, it must be dispensed professionally and in a way intended to be helpful instead of discouraging. Positive and negative feedback must be given at the right time and place using the appropriate tools and techniques. Feedback, if provided properly, encourages the receiver to improve performance, reduce errors, develop positivity and increase loyalty to the organisation.

The PD Training Giving Constructive Feedback Training Course provides valuable knowledge and skill development which will allow you to give feedback that boosts the performance and attitude of your employees.

This is a practical class that is suitable for all audiences and provides people with the tools that they can apply on-the-job (and in other contexts) the very next day.
